

CHISWICK GREEN

Where to buy in 2023? Why the global media is looking to Chiswick...

As we welcomed in the new year, the global press turned its attention on where to buy and live in 2023.

Chiswick, with its great lifestyle offering, leafy setting and growing foodie scene, grabbed particular attention – as did our latest development in the area, Chiswick Green.

Towards the end of 2022, The Times Bricks & Mortar took a deep dive into the neighbourhood as part of its 'Everything you need to know about moving to...' series, highlighting how the rejuvenation of High Road is helping to transform the already affluent west London enclave.

Alongside welcoming the exclusive High Road House, part of the Soho House Group, and glamorous restaurant and cocktail bar Rock & Rose in recent years, writer Alexandra Goss also took a closer look at how Chiswick Green – the only high-rise development in Chiswick – is establishing an exciting new address in the area.

The piece also included why Chiswick is ideal for foodies, with insights from local personality Mark Wrigglesworth, owner of the Good Wine Shop, who also took part in our 'Chiswick Chronicles' campaign last year.

Chiswick Green also made waves overseas, selected as one of Robb Report China's most exciting new London addresses – a prestigious accolade from one of China's most prominent magazines. Similarly, its impressive park and city views and the prestigious design names involved in the project saw the development top Property London's 2023 list of the capital's best new builds.

A little closer to home, Chiswick Green's exclusive collection of four townhouses piqued the interest of luxury local magazine, Chiswick Life, as a top choice for buyers looking for extra space and stylish design. Picking up on the townhouse's extensive private outdoor spaces, ideal location tucked behind the high street and spacious living area, it's no surprise the houses – alongside the range of apartments on offer – are set to remain in high demand in 2023 and beyond.
